சாபத்தை விரும்பினால் அது உனக்கு வந்திடும்

If He Loved Cursing, Let It Come Upon Him

Album 27 Song 2 | ஆல்பம் 27 பாடல் 2

Song 2 The Curse You Loved

Psalm 109 – Continuation of the imprecatory cry. The psalmist declares that the curses the wicked loved will return upon their own head — becoming their clothing and their inner being.

You loved the curse, so let it come upon you, O wicked one,
You hated the blessing, so let it flee far from you.

You crushed the poor and needy,
You sought to slay the brokenhearted.

You clothed yourself with cursing as with a garment,
It entered your body like water,
It soaked into your bones like oil.

Let the creditor seize all you have,
Let strangers plunder the fruit of your toil.

Let your children be fatherless,
Let your wife become a widow.
Let your children wander and beg,
Driven from their ruined homes.

You loved the curse, so let it come upon you, O wicked one,
You hated the blessing, so let it flee far from you.

what you cursed
what give fight
Let them suffer
Enchantment